TRIES THREE TIMES TO END OWN LIFE

Members of the Daly City fire department answered an alarm last Friday morning, and at 53 Alp street they found 23-year-old Mrs. Betty Brumley in a flaming bed. They extinguished the blaze, chided Mrs. Brumley, called insurance adjusters, and went back to their fire-house.

When the insurance adjuster arrived, he found three gas-cocks open, pouring gas into the room where Mrs. Brumley was seated. He turned the gas off and notified Daly City police.

The first aid department of Company No. 1 of the Daly City fire department was sent for, and removed Mrs. Brumley to the Villa Sanitarium, after rendering first aid.

Upon examination at the Villa Sanitarium, the doctors found that Mrs. Brumley had taken poison, and is now seriously ill, following her third attempt at suicide.

Authorities said she had been brooding over financial worries and the illness of her husband, a seaman, at a public hospital.

TRAFFIC SAFETY MEETING TONIGHT

The week from May 14 to May 18 inclusive, has been used for Safety Week in the Jefferson School District. A great effort has been made to bring before the young people of our schools the importance of traffic safety.

Our newspapers are full of accounts every day of terrible loss of life in traffic, a large per cent of which could be avoided if each and every one of us were safety conscious.

Every day this week, speakers are talking to our students in the grammar schools and high school. They are making every effort to stimulate these young people to think of this one important thing. They are appealing to their intelligence and their better judgment to do and act for their own safety as well as the safety of all others. The speakers for the week are: One from the California Automobile Association, one from the San Francisco Fire Department, one from the Boy Scouts, one from the State Highway Police and one from the Courts.

It is to be hoped that the message, and its great importance will reach into the home and that every member of every family will become safety conscious.

The week's activities will culminate with a mass meeting at the Jefferson Union high school tonight, May 18, at 8 P. M. The following program will be presented:

1. Advance of National and Organization Colors.
2. Patriotic Songs.
3. Welcome by Mayor H. H. Smith.
4. Speaking Choir, Jefferson Union High School.
5. Community Safety, L. M. Hill, Commander, American Legion.
6. Girls' Glee Clubs, Grammar Schools.
. Address, R. P. Schwerin, president Citizens' Bayshore Highway Safety Committee.
8. Boys' Glee Club, Grammar Schools.
9. Eagles' Band of Daly City.
10. One minute's silence for those who have lost their lives in traffic accidents.
11. Star Spangled Banner.
12. Retire Colors.

CROSSED WIRES CAUSE BLAZE IN AUTOMOBILE

The members of Companies No. 1, 4 and 5, Daly City Fire Department, began another busy week by responding to a call from the home of William De Vani, at 201 Bellevue avenue, near Lowell street, about 5:15 o'clock last Sunday morning.

They found a Graham-Paige car and a Chevrolet coupe ablaze in the family garage. Heat and smoke did a great deal of damage to both cars and the basement. The occupants of the house escaped uninjured. The fire was in all probability due to crossed wires in the Graham-Paige car. No damage was done to the upper portion of the house or the furniture.

LEGION AULILIARY PLANS POPPY SALE

"A poem inspired it and a little lady from Georgia started it," said June Craft, Preisdent of the Daly City unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, describing the origin of the custom of wearing poppies in honor of the World war dead. Complete arrangements have been made for Poppy Day, Saturday, May 26, when the members of the Auxiliary will distribute poppies throughout the city.

"While serving on the staff of the Y. M. C. A. overseas headquarters at Columbia University in November, 1918, Miss Moina Michael, of Athens, Georgia, received a copy of a magazine containing Col. John McCrae's poem, 'We Shall Not Sleep.' Touched by the poem's reference to poppies growing between the rows of crosses in the war cemeteries, Miss Michael decided to wear a poppy in honor of the war dead. She purchased a number of poppies and distributed them among the workers at the headquarters, starting a custom that has spread throughout the world."

The poppy was adopted as the memorial flower of the American Legion at the Legion's national convention in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1920. When the American Legion Auxiliary was organized the following year, the little red blossom became the Auxiliary's memorial flower. The poppy is also the memorial flower of the British Legion, and is worn in all parts of the British empire in tribute to the dead.

The flowers which the American Legion Auxiliary will distribute here have been made by disabled veterans, and contributions received for the flowers will go to the Legion and Auxiliary work for the disabled, their families and the families of the dead.

The memorial poppies have been a means of providing employment to hundreds of disabled World war veterans through the winter and spring months. The little red flowers have made possible earnings of approximately $100,000 for these disabled men.

Making of the paper poppies which the American Legion Auxiliary offers on Poppy Day, to be worn in honor of the World war dead, is reserved strictly for the war disabled. It offers a means of employment to the veterans unable to do other work, and not only brings them money for the support of themselves and families, but aids in their rehabilitation by giving them beneficial, interesting work.

This year fifty-eight different poppy making centers have been in operation in forty states. The number of poppies that a man can make in one day is restricted, in order that the workers will not tax their strength too greatly.

"TAKE" MUST BE REDUCED IN JANUARY

By J. W. MARCHBANK

When a Listo comes bounding down in front a peculiar thrill is given the race-goer. Scores of ordinary events probably had left him unmoved. But here was a superlative performer furnishing superlative enjoyment. The racing pastime comes to a climax with the victory of a horse of the class of the winner of the Stanford Handicap.

Rhapsodizing is very much in order at times, but getting down to the practical angle involved, the rhetorical question may be asked:

"How are we to get more Listos at Tanforan?"

One of the solutions of the problem is in encouraging the shipment of good thoroughbreds from the East for our meetings. As I have pointed out before, one of the first things to be done is to reduce the commission on the pari mutuel pools. The requisite action can be taken at the session of the Legislature in January, not so far away, with the days flying by.

A low "take" will be a positive encouragement to owners of large establishments, as it is a guarantee the sport is on the highest plane and not run simply for the money there is in it. No one will take issue with the statement that the best racing in the country is at tracks abstracting only a reasonable amount from the wagering pools.

The commission should be cut down from the present twelve per cent to nine per cent, divided—six per cent to the racing association, one and one-half per cent to the state, and one and one-half per cent to a fund for a big race purse.

I am repeating the exact division of the nine per cent as numerous inquiries are being made from many sections as to the details of my plan. The whole idea is based on the essential proposition that racing should be conducted as a wholesome pastime and not as a commerical enterprise.

VETERANS HONOR AMERICA'S DEAD

In 1921, Madame Guerin, familiarly known as "The Poppy Lady From France," assisted by the Franco-American Children's League, made the first definite sale of poppies in the United States.

The League was dissolved and Madam Guerin appealed to the Veterans of Foreign Wars for co-operation, and commencing with 1922, it has been an annual appeal to the citizenry to help honor the war dead and disabled.

For two years, most of the poppies were supplied by eastern manufacturers, but at the 1923 national encampment it was voted to establish a Buddy Poppy factory, and it was in operation for the 1924 sale.

The poppies made at the V. F. W. factory are made by disabled veterans and gives them a dependence that otherwise would be lacking, in that they get paid for their work. Not only charitable, but takes away the unsavory taste of asking for aid. The veteran in any walk of life does not want charity. Their creed is live, and let live. Every year the sale of these poppies grows, and at the 1934 sale, millions will be sold.

Thus, briefly, is the history of the V. F. W. poppy, which will be placed on sale in the week of Memorial Day by members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. We urgently solicit your valued support and ask every citizen of Daly City to wear the red poppy, emblematic of our respect and esteem for our departed and disabled comrades. The citizens of America needed them in 1918. They need the help of American citizens in 1934.

The second annual picnic of the Post will be held on Sunday, June 10, at Valemar Park. The committee is working hard to make this picnic the biggest in our history. Tentative plans call for competitive drills, and games, dancing, and other forms of entertainment. As soon as definite plans are outlined, they will be released through these columns.

The general committee on Americanization will hold their initial meeting and elect permanent officers in the near future, and all those who have been notified and signified their willingness to co-operate will be notified within the week just where the meeting will be held.

Lest you forget, wear a Buddy Poppy on Memorial Day.

FRED R. LINSER.

Daly City Firemen Prevent Destruction of Automobile

The members of the Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, Stations No. 1, 4 and 5, answered a fire alarm last Saturday morning at 4:15 o'clock. They found a Ford coupe, owned by an employee of the Colonial Restaurant, at Flournoy and Mission streets, on fire. They extinguished the blaze, which they found had been caused by crossed wires.

TANFORAN RACES DRAW BIG CROWDS

Tanforan's spring race meeting nears the home stretch this week end with just two weeks left to go before closing date, June 2. However, unusually attractive cards are being planned for the remaining days of racing, J. W. Marchbank, director general of the track, announced this week.

Last week end thousands of fans thronged the San Bruno plant for the Stanford Handicap, won by Listo, the horse that has come back to stake race form, after a slump of several seasons. The better horses at the track competed in the event, but the rejuvenated Listo showed the way nearly all the way around.

The feature tomorrow (Saturday) will be the Lloyd K. Hillman Handicap for which a cup will be presented in addition to an attractive purse. Again the thoroughbred leaders at the track will match skill in this event.

Jockey George Burns continues to lead all riders at the track by a substantial margin, with thirty-eight victories to his credit. He is said to be certain of winning the wrist watch to be given at the close of the meeting to the rider who has brought in the most victors. Jockeys Donald McCown and Howard Grayson are tied for second place with 19 victories each.

Track fans and stable owners also are looking forward to "getaway week," which always offers a series of thrills and upsets in the "dope" schedule. However, Tanforan has not been without a great many upsets thus far in the meeting. The favored ones often have failed to come through, and frequently an outsider has come to the fore. The failure of favorites to come through has been explained by a combination of circumstances, chief of which has been the probable failure of favorite backers to determine their ability before classing them as favorites.

CELEBRATES TENTH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Pearl Jones, of Vista Grande avenue, entertained a number of children last Saturday in honor of her daughter Shirley, who celebrated her tenth birthday. The afternoon was spent in playing games, after which dainty refreshments were served to the following guests: Nadine O'Brien, Dorothy Hammer, Loraine Sanders, Eloise Harrison, Audrey Teal, Curtistine Teal, Anna Marie Nylund, Wesley Jones and Jerry Jones. Mrs. Jones also had as her guests Mrs. Marie Nylund, Mrs. Audrey Teal, Mrs. Fred Jones, and Mrs. Iverson.

State Forestry Work Discussed

GOLD AND SILVER GO ALONG STRONG

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Prosperity of the gold mining industry is well established and even greater things than at first anticipated with the increase in the price of gold are in the offing. Mining experts and Government officials are unanimous in describing the present position of the precious metal.

I was intrigued awhile back by a statement of George S. Pearson, minister of mines for British Columbia. His review of the situation up north is comprehensive and well worth quoting, at least in part. In the Vancouver Sun recently the statesman said:

"It is freely predicted that mining is going to play an important, perhaps the most important part, in solving the more pressing of British Columbia's problems. Mining in British Columbia suffered through the effects of the world's economic ills. It was on its way to new heights in 1929 with an ouput valued at over $68,000,000.

"The drop in base metal prices, the depression in silver—these factors led to the marked falling off in value of production until in 1932 it reached the bottom of $28,000,000 odd.

"Last year there was an increase. British Columbia's mining had rounded the corner and it seems a safe prediction to say that the climb will proceed steadily.

"In recent years there has been an intensely interesting change in the direction of mining development. Due to economic pressure the attention of prospectors and capital has been directed to the discovery and exploitation of properties carrying gold values. Much success has already been attained in this way.

"The Bridge River District, situated some two hundred miles due north of the city of Vancouver, has been found to be heavily mineralized. The Pioneer and Bralorne gold mines are established as important producers, and there are several other prospects in this same locality that seem to have promising futures. New communities have grown up and the region at this time is contributing to the maintenance of a population of at least 2,000 persons.

"Northeast of the Bridge River area are the historic Quesnel and Cariboo mining divisions. The communities of Williams Lake, Quesnel and Barkerville, which for many years were held together by business growing out of desultory placer mining and cattle ranching, were never more prosperous than at this time.

"During the past year in other parts of British Columbia there has been this same intense search for gold properties."

* * *

The Canadian Mining Reporter has made an estimate that the Bralorne and Pioneer mines, spoken of by Mr. Pearson, are the richest mines in Western America. The position given the two large properties was due principally to recent rich strikes at the Bralorne.

* * *

Output of the Bralorne this year may reach 60,000 ounces of gold, according to a late statement, worth $2,100,000, with profit of at least $1,000,000 before taxes, depletion and depreciation.

* * *

It is interesting to note that six countries play leading roles in the economics of silver, four as producers and two as providing the vast Oriental markets which absorb the great bulk of the world's output. The New York Times says the four producing countries, in order of importance, are:

Mexico, which produced 34 per cent of the world's supply of new silver in the thirty years from 1900 to 1929.

United States, which produced 30 per cent in the same period, largely as a by-product of copper, lead and zinc.

Canada, with an output of 9 per cent.

Peru, which contributed 5 per cent, from historic mines dating back to the days of the Incas.

As is well known, prior to 1870, the value of an ounce of silver in this country remained almost stationary at about one-sixteenth of the value of an ounce of gold. About 1900 the ratio had declined to 33 to 1, in 1910 it fell to 38 to 1, 1930, to 53 to 1, 1931, to 71 to 1, and later to 73 to 1.

Efforts are now being made in Congress to help the silver miner by passing carefully drawn up bills.

Hickman Faces Murder Charge

Millard Hickman, one of the best known steamship company officials in San Francisco, is in jail, facing a charge of murder, following the finding of the body of Louise Jeppesen, whose home was in Ogden, Utah, in Golden Gate Park. The girl had been assaulted and choked to death.

AWARD CONTRACT FOR A NEW WELL

At the meeting of the City Council last Monday night a contract for boring a new 400 foot well at Citrus and Niantic avenues was awarded to Mrs. Charles K. Knapp.

A resolution was passed authorizing application to the State Board of Equalization for authority to expend money for garbage collection and for pay for the volunteer firemen.

An ordinance was passed changing the name of Frankfort street, in the Crocker Tract, to Templeton avenue.

At the request of Colonel Skeggs, of the Division of Highways, that some agreement be reached on the question of relocation of sewers and water pipe in the Mission street widening, Mayor Smith was authorized to arrange for a meeting between Colonel Skeggs, Engineer Clyde Healy, the members of the City Council, Engineer Klassen and Superintendent of Water Works A. J. Bodien to work out some plan.

Letters were received from the K. of C., Old Glory Post, V. F. W., and the Veteran Firemen's Association, indorsing the proposed plan for paying the volunteer firemen.

A letter from the Railway Express Agency told of the establishment of a pick-up and delivery service for Daly City by that company, similar to the service in San Francisco. The telephone number for that service is Kearny 3100.

A petition was received from property owners on Mission street between the county line and Crocker avenue, requesting the Council to remove all sign-boards from that district. The request was referred to the city planning committee.

A request for permission to erect two new signboards in Daly City was also referred to the city planning committee.

A letter from the Fire Commissioners notified the Council of a new member in Company No. 3 of the fire department, Laurence Kennedy.

A letter was received from Dr. A. A. Shaghoian, thanking the board for her appointement as health officer.

A petition was received from a number of merchants, asking permission to sell fireworks for a limited number of days, under a plan similar to that of last year. The matter was referred to the Fire Commissioner.

City Clerk B. C. Ross was instructed to advertise for bids for general liability insurance for the city for the year July 1, 1934, to July 1, 1935.

Councilman Selmi reported on a meeting of representatives from the various municipalities on the question of obtaining more of the gas tax money for cities.

Veteran Firemen Picnic Scheduled for Sunday

The Veteran Firemen of Daly City will hold their basket picnic on Sunday, May 20. The caravan will leave the top of the hill, Hillcrest drive and Mission street, at 9:30 A. M. sharp. Everybody is invited to come. Follow the highway to old Mountain View; watch for signs to turn. Bring a cup, as coffee will be served free. Admission per car is 50 cents. The name of the picnic grounds is Blackberry Farm. Follow the crowd and watch for arrow to guide you to picnic grounds.

HONOR P. T. A. OFFICERS

Mrs. Catherine Foreman and Mrs. Maud Hanselman entertained last Friday at luncheon at the home of Mrs. Foreman, on Woodrow street, in honor of the outgoing officers and chairman of the Woodrow Wilson and Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Association. After the luncheon a delightful afternoon at cards was enjoyed by Mrs. Maude Henselman, Mrs. Annie Legg, Mrs. Catherine Brown, Mrs. Lily Pizzola, Mrs. Virginia Callsen, Mrs. Margaret Miller, Mrs. Latin, Mrs. Pearl Jones, Mrs. Cora Rae, Mrs. Ada Eade, Mrs. Grace Hill, Mrs. Marge Woodside, Mrs. Eva Page, and Mrs. Catherine Foreman.

CHESS HEADS VETERANS

T. Louis Chess returned to San Mateo last Tuesday as district commander of the first district of the Disabled American Veterans, following his election to the post at a three-day convention of the organization at Sacramento. The district which Chess heads is bounded on the north by Eureka and the south by Monterey. San Francisco and Oakland are the two larger cities included in the area.

Speeders Again Active

Traffic tags issued over the week end by members of the San Mateo county highway patrol showed that speeders on various county highways are becoming active again. Nearly fifty citations were issued over the week end.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NOTES OF INTEREST

The fifth and final edition of the Woodrow Wilson Monthly was distributed Tuesday. The paper is prepared entirely by the children, under the direction of Mrs. McGuffick. Not only do the pupils do the work of writing the articles, but they also mimeograph it. The present issue was dedicated to the mothers, in honor of Mother's Day.

All of the classes of the Woodrow Wilson school, with the exception of the Fifth grades, are going to Golden Gate Park on Friday, May 18. While there they will visit the Academy of Natural Science, Aviary, Museum, Conservatory, and, last, but not least, the Playground. It will prove to be a pleasant and profitable day.

Children of the Seventh and Eighth grades had the opportunity of listening to Mr. Moore of the California State Automobile Association, on Monday. His talk was on "Safety," and particularly traffic safety. Some of the information he imparted was that 90 per cent of the traffic accidents are avoidable; 30,000 people are killed yearly by automobiles; 1,000,000 people are injured yearly; and one and one-half billion dollars are wasted as a result of traffic accidents, which comprise the greatest group of accidents. Also, accidents cause much suffering and grief to the persons near and dear to the victim.

The older generation does not seem to understand speed, because they are the product of horse and buggy days. It rests on the youth of today to do better in the future by developing a safety consciousness.

Mr. Moore cautioned the children to use the safety instructions they have received during the year, in the coming vacation. A safety poster is sent out each month by the California State Automobile Association, and is displayed in each room, to keep constantly before the children the idea of safety.

LEGION POPPY SALE TO BE HELD MAY 26

The memorial poppies which the women of the American Legion Auxiliary will distribute in Daly City on "Poppy Day," Saturday, May 26, will recall vivid pictures to the minds of World war veterans who served overseas, according to L. M. Hill, Commander of Daly City Post No. 410 of the American Legion. The poppies blooming amid the waste and destruction of the battle front, and among the bare graves of the dead, left an unforgettable impression on the American soldiers, he said.

"When the American divisions drove forward in the great offensive of 1918, they entered a region torn, desolated and trampled by the most tremendous battles of history. Destruction and death were everywhere, but amid it all the little wild poppies bloomed on. When machine gun and shell fire took its toll from the American ranks, the poppy was nature's floral offering on the graves of the dead. To us those poppies seemed to symbolize the brave spirit of our fallen comrades, and when we returned home we made the poppy the memorial flower of the American Legion."

Poppies to be worn in tribute to the men who gave their lives for America in the World war will be offered on the streets throughout the city Saturday, May 26, by the American Legion Auxiliary women. Men of the Legion are co-operating in promotion of the project. The poppies, paper replicas of the flowers that grew on the battle fields, have been made by disabled veterans at Palo Alto hospital. All contributions received for the poppies will be devoted to the rehabilitation and welfare work of the Legion and Auxiliary among the disabled veterans and the dependent families of veterans.

A color scheme was carried out in pink and green. Among those present were Lorraine Overstreet, Patsy Cochran, Dorothy and Hazel Eason, Anita Kale, Beatrice Handy, Dorothy Smith, Irene Utman, Mr. and Mrs. Overstreet, Mrs. Allen and Lois Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Ray. The honored guest was the recipient of many lovely gifts.

Plans have been completed for the card party to be given by the San Mateo County Council of the American Legion Auxiliary, to be held in South San Francisco on June 7, at 8:30 P. M. Mrs. Irene Doyle is general chairman, and has several committees working with her to make this affair an outstanding success. Both bridge and whist will be played. The proceeds of this affair will go to help purchase uniforms for the county drill team.

Crocker P.-T. A. Delegates Make Interesting Reports

At the last meeting of the Crocker P.-T. A. held in the P.-T. A. room of the Pershing School, Tuesday, May 8, the delegates to the district gave excellent reports. Each delegate seemed to get quite a great deal from the annual convention of the seventeenth district, and brought back quite a few ideas to be carried out next year.

Our delegates to the State Convention at Sacramento, Mrs. Walker, retiring president, and Mrs. Clifton, new president, gave us their very thorough reports on the State Convention, and both felt that the inspiration they received from the different speakers at the convention would help to carry them through a very successful year next year. Mrs. Walker, who, as outgoing president, takes the parliamentarian work for the coming year, attended the classes on parliamentary law, and Founders' Day. She feels that these classes have helped her a great deal in the work she must do during the coming year. Mrs. Clifton, the incoming president, attended the president instruction classes, and all other classes that she felt would help to make her proficient in her work as president. Crocker feels that they did well to send as their delegates two such enthusiastic women, and are looking forward to an excellent year.

The four children from the Crocker School who received first prize and honorable mention, Violet Kling, Billie Jocelyn Pierce, Eleanor Urton and Eurich McKell, were present, and were presented with gifts from the Crocker P.-T. A. to show our appreciation for the honor our unit received through their efforts. Their posters were displayed at the State Convention and received honorable mention there, so we feel that they compared very favorably with the work of the other school children throughout California.

Because of the illness of Miss Mosconi, the music instructor of the Crocker School and other grammar schools in the Jefferson School District, Crocker was very much disappointed that the glee clubs of the girls and boys of the Crocker School were unable to be with us at this meeting. Owing to that fact, the musical entertainment promised the members, had to be postponed until the beginning of the next school term. We are looking forward to hearing them next year, as we are exceedingly proud of our Glee Clubs and the work that Miss Mosconi is doing with them.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served at which time Mrs. Pauw, on behalf of the members of Crocker P.-T. A., presented our much loved retiring president, Mrs. Walker, with a beautiful potted palm tree and the fern stand to set it in. Words failed Mrs. Walker when she thanked the members for the gift, but we all know that she will cherish it for the sentiment which went with it, and she will remember her work with the ladies of Crocker P.-T. A. with a great deal of pleasure, especially now that the hardest part of it is over.

A great deal of credit for the splendid evening goes to Emmerillas Gehringer, chairlady, and her very able committee.

Beloved Teacher Passes On

A requiem high mass was said at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church last Monday morning at 9 o'clock for the repose of the soul of Sister Thomas, principal of the Parish School. Sister Thomas passed away last Saturday afternoon at 3:55 o'clock in St. Mary's Hospital. She was seriously ill but a few short days when the end came. The remains of the beloved teacher was shipped to Los Angeles for interment.

Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P.-T. A.

The Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P.-T. A. held its regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the Woodrow Wilson School.

The District Convention report was given by Mrs. Anna Legge and Mrs. Marguerite Woodside.

The State Convention report was given by Mrs. Maude Hanselman and Mrs. Pearl Jones and was most interesting. Mrs. C. H. Turner, of Redondo Beach, was elected state president.

A very interesting program was given by the low fifth grade:

Poem ....."Somebody's Mother"
By Curtistine Teal.
Piano Solo ..... By Edward Hahn
Poem ....."The Day Is Done"

Special Announcements by the Crocker P.-T. A.

Our next, and last meeting, will be held at Fleischacker Playgrounds, where the ladies will bring their children and their lunches and enjoy the day. School will be out, as it will be held on the second Tuesday in June, and everyone is requested to come as early as they can, in order to have more time for the picnic before the meeting begins. This is an annual meeting as it has been the custom to hold our last meeting at Fleischacker ever since our first president, Mrs. Alexander, started to do it. All those members who have attended this meeting in the past will be present, and ask those who have not been there heretofore to be sure and attend this last meeting. It is an excellent way to get acquainted.

Crocker announces her installation in conjunction with the P.-T. A. units of Jefferson Union High School, Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande, and Colma units on Friday evening, May 25, at 8 P. Mrs. Garland, the president of the seventeenth district, and Mrs. Beach, vice president, will install the officers of these four units.

On May 23, Mrs. Garland will hold a school of instruction for the incoming officers and their chairmen from each unit in the district, at her home in Menlo Park. Crocker will appreciate the attendance of her officers and chairmen at this meeting.

On Friday, May 18, Crocker will take part in the International Fair, an annual meeting held by the seventeenth district in the auditorium of the gymnasium in the San Mateo Junior College. All members are urged to attend, as there will be a wonderful time for all those present.

POPULAR DALY CITY BOY RECEIVES DENTAL DEGREE

A very large attendance was present at the thirty-eighth annual commencement of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, a school of dentistry, held at the Scottish Rite Auditorium, May 11, 1934. Lawrence O. Vireno, a very popular local boy, received the Doctor of Dental Surgery degree and was granted the superintendent's award which is given to the senior student most proficient in clinic infirmary practice both in quantity and quality in all departments of operative dentistry.

During the evening Brother Leo, chancellor of St. Mary's, addressed the graduates, his subject being "Broken Bridges." The degrees were conferred by Dr. Henry Clay Veatch, who is president of the college and awards presented by Dr. Arthur McDowell, dean of the school. A large number of Dr. Vireno's friends were present to witness him receive his degree and wish him every success in his chosen profession.

Dr. L. Vireno was appointed to the faculty and will remain at the college as instructor.

PIONEER FAMILIES UNITED BY RECENT WEDDING

At a lovely ceremony performed in Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, Miss Cecelia Nelsson became the bride of Laurence Kennedy. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Charles Nelsson, wore a gown of ruffled white taffeta and a lovely tulle veil. Her bouquet was an old-fashioned one of gardenias and lilies of the valley on a background of white satin. Miss Martha Nelsson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of pink Celanese, a matching horsehair hat, and carried a bouquet of red roses. Miss Florence Kennedy, a sister of the groom, was the bridesmaid. She wore a green silk dress and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. The groom was attended by Melvin Kennedy, the best man, and Charles Nelsson, a brother of the bride.

The young couple left for a short trip following the reception to relatives at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nelsson, of Vendome avenue, which was prettily decorated for the happy occasion, and upon their return will make their home at 250 Citrus avenue.

Two pioneer families of Daly City were thus united last week. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy both attended our local high school and have a host of friends who wish them bon voyage on their journey through life together.

Cathleen Dawe, daughter of Mrs. A. Dawe, of Woodrow street, entertained six of her little friends last Saturday afternoon, at the home of her mother, in honor of her sixth birthday.

MERK RESIGNS AS RELIEF DIRECTOR

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday reluctantly accepted the resignation of Sam D. Merk as county unemployment relief director, and extended a vote of gratitude for Mr. Merk's work.

The board delayed the naming of a successor to Mr. Merk, pending a recommendation from the emergency relief committee, headed by Robert J. Koshland, who, it was reported, may be the committee's choice for the post.

The supervisors agreed to permit Captain L. G. McAloney, assistant director, to assume Mr. Merk's duties, pending the appointment of a director. The board delayed for a week action on the resignation of C. C. Lydon, of San Mateo, from the relief committee.

South San Francisco's $75,000 school bond issue was purchased by the Anglo-California Bank of San Francisco, the low bidder.

Hearing of petitions for the creation of a Millbrae fire district was set for June 18 by the board. At that time the board will hear a report on the advisability of creating the district, and protests from the residents.

Skyline zoning hearings will be held by the county planning commission on June 8 and July 3, in Redwood City, the board decided. At this time any protests against the zoning of property along the highway through San Mateo county will be received.

Paul McCarthy, Redwood City attorney and councilman, asked the supervisors to meet with city representatives on the granting of a portion of the gasaline tax to municipalities for street work. Mr. McCarthy said that City Managers E. P. Wilsey, of San Mateo, and E. A. Rolison, of Redwood City, had prepared an extensive report on the subject. The board agreed to hear the citizens' pleas next Monday at 9 o'clock.

County Engineer James S. James was granted $15,000 out of county relief funds to make up a deficit in his department, caused by the supplying of materials for unemployment projects. The allowance also will carry the work until the end of the fiscal year, July 1.

"BLESSING IN DISGUISE" IN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

"All things work together for good to them that love God," will be the text from which Rev. John R. Stevenson will preach Sunday morning at the 11o'clock service. "High Buildings and Long Bridges" will be the theme for the evening at 7:45.

Anne finally promised that she would talk to Neal about going away; but Neal, like most men, and especially like most husbands, while deeply concerned over acute illness, did not regard convalescence as a serious matter. Now that she was up and dressed, now that she went out for a short ride in the motor every day, now that he saw her supervising Nancy's fall wardrobe with interest and shepherding her brothers into the social field, now that he heard her discussing dinners with Alphonsine, he assumed that she was "perfectly all right," and said so.

But in the succeeding weeks he watched her with secret anxiety. She was—he was reluctantly forced to admit to himself—very thin, very white and very listless. He tried to find satisfactory explanations for this: of course the loss of the baby had been a shock to her; but she would recover from that. Of course she had suffered a good deal of pain; but after all, her constitution was good, she ought to have excellent powers of recuperation. But did she? It began to look as if she did not. About the middle of November, quite as if it were his own idea advanced for the first time, he said a little gravely he thought it would be a good plan for her to have a change of air.

"It's nice and cool in Quebec," he told Anne.

"It's nice and cool in Washington now," retorted Anne.

"Well, you could have gone away sooner if you had wanted to, couldn't you?" he asked almost grimly. "You said you didn't care—"

"I didn't and I don't unless you could come too—"

"Just before the opening of congress? My dear girl, you know that is impossible. I am so driven at this time of the year I hardly know which way to turn. Besides . . ."

"Besides, you feel that this year, if you went away at all, you ought to go to Hinsboro?"

Neal hesitated, then drew in his breath and spoke with the air of one who was preparing for a deep plunge.

"Yes," he said at length, "I do. I have decided to run for the senate. I would never be satisfied if I didn't and that means a real fight. I ought to have got started at it sooner. Of course the man that's in has certain advantages, but Fletcher, who is almost certain to oppose me, has millions behind him where I have thousands, and he owns the biggest newspaper in the state. I do think, Anne, you sometimes overlook the importance of keeping in touch with state affairs in your desire not to miss anything here. You are kind to every one who comes to Washington but you're not at home a great deal. Now if you could get to Hinsboro early this spring . . ."

"I can. I will."

"And make up your mind for a heavy summer—exert yourself. Don't act like a high-brow. A little of that stuff you tried to hush up—teaching school, living in a tenement and doing your own washing—has its points. And in one of the sensational sheets you are pictured as an impudent, aggressive, ignorant little climber. The stories are terribly distorted, I know, but there is a grain of truth in them, and they are not doing me any good."

Anne sat very still. "An ignorant, impudent, aggressive little climber—" So that was the way she appeared to her enemies and Neal's. The perseverance, the patience, the self-sacrifice, which had enabled her to grow from a raw little country girl into a well-developed, self-assured woman were ignoble rather than admirable qualities when viewed with unfriendly eyes. She felt as if something cold and sharp had penetrated to her heart and coiled around it. But Neal, unconscious that she was stricken, went on talking.

"I don't want to hurt your feelings, Anne, and of course I know you don't mean to be indiscreet, but—well . . . Lassiter was here a good deal last winter. It was rumored around that you—that he—anyway when the baby was born, there was a paragraph in City Chatter—Miss Letts showed it to me—not that I believe a word of the scurrilous stuff or that she did—you know that, of course. You know that I love you and trust you, but I thought you ought to know . . ."

Feeling that he had perhaps said enough, Neal bent over the evening paper. It was half an hour before he looked up and when he did, he noticed that Anne had left the room. He supposed that she must have gone to bed, as she often did now that she was so far from strong, but when he reached the Colonial chamber which she had made so beautiful, she was not there either. Well, then she must be helping Sol and Sam with their French. She often did that too—astonishing how she had mastered it. He couldn't get a can of hot water himself if the steward who happened to wait on him didn't speak English—clever, Anne was—and better every year—a great credit to him. He never would have got where he had without her. Complacently, he went to sleep.

In the morning when he woke she lay, as usual, beside him, her curls tumbled over the pillow, one slim bare arm thrust under her head. He never guessed that she had spent most of the night walking blindly beside the Potomac river, regarded with an anxious curiosity by an occasional watchful policeman and with covetous misunderstanding by an occasional night prowler. But there was something about her that kept both from approaching her—something almost unearthly—something wholly tragic. The slimy serpent of slander had crossed her path as it crosses the path of almost every man and woman of destiny. And in the first hour of her agony—it seemed to her that her feet would never touch clean earth again.

• • • • • • • • •

"Yes, this is Mrs. Conrad speaking—No, Senator Conrad cannot come to the telephone. Oh, thank you, Mr. Baker, I'll take the figures—yes, I have it right, I think—Conrad thirty-two, Fletcher seventeen."

Anne hung up the receiver and went swiftly from the library to the shadowy hall. In the dimness she could barely see Neal standing near the door, his white face strained and tense. She walked over to him and put her hand on his arm.

"Mr. Baker has just telephoned from Bakerfield," she said gently. "The vote is thirty-two for you and seventeen for Fletcher."

A harsh sound, something like a smothered growl arose from Neal's throat. As he had foreseen, the campaign had been a bitterly hard one. He had borne the brunt of it bravely, almost buoyantly, but on election night he had suddenly collapsed and, leaving his headquarters, had come home, refusing to see anyone or even to speak with anyone but Anne. If the telephone had been a coiled rattlesnake ready to strike at him, he could not have manifested a greater horror at the suggestion of touching it. So taking her place beside it, Anne sat waiting for the tidings which sooner or later would come. Tidings of victory, tidings of defeat. She had no way of guessing which they were to be. She only knew that she must be there when they came. That until then she must comfort, cheer, cajole, caress—

In the gathering dusk, her hands clasped tightly in her lap, she reviewed the months that had passed since that night of desperation, when, bruised and bleeding, she had walked slowly along the Speedway confessing herself beaten, vowing that since she had tried so hard and failed, she would never try any more; and then suddenly, miraculously, finding the strength to vow that she had only just begun to fight. Turning from the gray Potomac, she had walked beside the still pool in which the columns of the Lincoln memorial lay reflected in the ghastly light. There was peace there—peace not to be found in the rushing river. She sat down on the bank and clasped her hands over her eyes. Slowly, surely her sanity seemed to return—her balance to be restored. Go back to Hinsboro, humbled and humiliated, with Neal's career involved! Never, never, never! Confess that a filthy periodical had the power to challenge her good name? Her dead baby seemed to rise from his grave forbidding her. She shook the tears from her eyes, threw back her head, and walked towards home. . . .

"State Headquarters? Yes, Mrs. Conrad speaking for Senator Conrad—two wards in Belford have gone for Fletcher by a large majority. Thank you. Yes."

Out in the hall again. Neal seized her arm and spoke before she could do so. "I heard you. The first two wards they have heard from! If I lose Belford I am lost."

"You haven't lost it! What do two wards amount to in a city? Nothing, nothing at all . . ."

Back to the telephone.

"Yes—Mrs. Conrad speaking. Oh, the report from the third ward—two hundred eighty-six to ninety-five in favor of my husband? Yes—I will tell him— Neal, did you hear that? You have carried the third ward in Belford almost three to one."

"Well, until I hear from the north of the state, that won't reassure me much . . ."

"Headquarters calling. Figures from Chaselford, Summerdale, Medfield—just about a wash-out, Mrs. Conrad. Would you care for the exact figures?"

Fabric Gloves Add Zest to the Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN it comes to exciting events in the fashion realm the scene centers around fabric gloves and the matching accessories which go with them. The new gloves reveal style potentialities such as the rank and file of us never dreamed could exist in connection with what once upon a time we were wont to regard as mere hand coverings, with perhaps a little variation in design and stitching and color now and then.

However, here on the stage of fashion this very moment speaking for themselves is an endless array of gloves made of every material known to the ingenuity of man and revealing a wealth of ideas which are simply breathtaking in point of originality and audacious styling.

The importance of cotton for frocks and gowns, for smart ensembles and for suits started the furor by creating a need for gloves to co-ordinate in fabric and feeling with the new costume for daytime wear. This movement toward unique fabric gloves received additional impetus from the great French couturiers. With utmost enthusiasm Chanel and Talbot, those two foremost originators of sportswear vogues, sponsor fabric gloves with matched accessories for spring and summer. So sound and altogether intriguing is the idea, it is spreading like wildfire throughout fashion's domain.

The interpretations of this new mode for matching accessories are legion. Just a glimpse of the new gloves of linen with gingham printed linen cuffs together with a tailored flower of the printed linen to wear on coat lapel or at the shoulder of a sports frock (illustrated to the right) and your peace of mind will be destroyed until you become the happy possessor of just such or its equivalent.

Perhaps you will covet even more a white scarf collar of open basket-weave cotton, crossbarred in blue at the ends and edges with white gauntlet gloves of crinkled cotton crepe with deep pointed cuffs of matching basket weave, such as the figure seated in the picture is wearing.

Chamoisette, that practical standby, is glorified anew this season in gloves that feature pin-checked gingham cuffs lined with plain gingham, with matching reversible collar-scarf in the monotone and checked fabric. It appears also in gloves with cuffs and matching tailored bow for shoulder or neckline made of gayly printed cotton. A most attractive accessory set of crocheted string features gloves and scarf of white, with the flared ends of the scarf and the flare cuffs of the gloves in three graduated shades of blue.

But do not think that your new fabric gloves simply must have matched accessories to be smart. There are so many materials and so many styles in glove fashions in general, it is impossible to do more than enumerate the important trends. Watch for the very sheer milanese chiffons when the hot weather comes. They are in dark shades as well as white and are the coolest ever as well as wonderfully good looking.

Many of the new gloves in a variety of fabrics reflect the tailored vogue. Note the group pictured in the inset. Below to the left is a glove of dull luster diagonal oatmeal-type fabric in a slip-on style; above it, a washable chamoisette open cuff gauntlet with smart wood button at the wrist; next (top to the left) a sansheen slip-on with two tiny pearl buttons at the wrist and with scalloped edge; in the center, another chamoisette glove with novelty stitching trim in leaf design around the cutout edge of the open cuff (very smart in navy). Above to the right short slip-ons in fine honeycomb knit with rib-knit frill edging; below, gloves featuring a pleated self-fabric frill and diagonal stitching; and concluding the group a most outstanding type—crochet string slip-ons with lacy cuffs which look as if hand crocheted.

GREEK AND ROMAN TREND IN SANDALS

The shoe designers, who are taking themselves as seriously these days as the old masters immortalized in the Metropolitan museum, have delved into the ancient history of many nations to produce the array of sandals and ghillies, bejeweled dance slippers and tailored pumps that confront the modern woman whose grandmother used to be contented with one good serviceable pair of shoes a year.

The up-and-coming deb this season will wear sandals modeled after those worn by Helen of Troy, or beach slippers such as once adorned the pink-tipped toes of Cleopatra.

Authentically Greek and Roman in their inspiration are the new sandals worn not only for beach wear, but to complement any kind of summer sports costume. They're simple affairs made only of a couple of straps and a sole, leaving the toes altogether untrammeled.

The footgear of a monk in Capri provided the inspiration for the monk sandal which promises to be the rage of the summer resorts.

"In the Money" Silks for Spring Latest in Paris

The newest things in printed silks for spring are called "In the Money" prints. They represent the gold-silver inflation and noninflation arguments, but without taking sides.

They are made in a series of eight patterns of five colors each—40 different colors in all. Those of us who have had glimpses of them agreed that they were the last word in the New Deal for dining out, tea dances, country clubs, and even the "Tag End" dresses for those occasions when anybody might wear anything and yet nobody seems exactly sure of what will be the right thing.

QUILTED VELVET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The call of the evening mode is for unique and fanciful capes. The lovely model pictured here is of quilted translucent velvet in a delectable leaf green. The Elizabethan collar is stiffened to flare away from the throat so as to be perfectly comfortable at the same time that it is extremely flattering.

Colored Tweeds

Those soft camel's-hair tweeds are being woven now in such combinations as a dull rose-purple with a tan check.

Sea Shell Slippers

Abalone sea shell is the inspiration for some new evening slippers in opaline, satin luster.

ON BEING LATE

By R. H. WILKINSON

©, Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

BARBARA WILLIAMS is the sort of person who never arrives anywhere on time.

If you have an appointment to meet her on a certain street corner at a certain time, you can depend upon her being at least a half hour late, and safely regulate your own time of arrival accordingly.

No matter what the circumstances or how important the function Barbara concerns herself not with promptness.

Of course she is always full of excuses and apologies, and actually gives the impression of being frightfully sorry that "something intervened so she just couldn't make it."

Moreover, she is a wholly lovable person, possessed of an incredibly sweet disposition, and delightful company.

And when she looks at you with deep concern and pleading written in her rather attractive brown eyes, you are apt to cover your annoyance with a forgiving smile and hope that next time she'll make an effort to be more accommodating.

There have been numberless suggestions offered for cures for people having this being-late fault.

But most always these suggestions are offered by persons who don't have to live with folks like Barbara Williams.

It is quite simple when you are not dependent on a Barbara Williams for one thing and another, to suggest tyrannical methods of effecting a cure.

• • •

Dick Williams, who is Barbara's husband, is an easy going sort of person, and for a time after their marriage in 1928 his wife's tardiness didn't bother him a great deal.

But as their wedded life progressed, the thing began to get on his nerves.

After a year of meeting Barbara downtown once each week on Thursday nights in order that they might dine out together, and having to wait 30 minutes beyond the scheduled time, he spoke of the matter, at first casually, then more seriously and finally in an outburst of anger.

And on such occasions Barbara would turn the full power of her large brown eyes on him and nod her head in sad agreement.

"I don't blame you, darling," she'd say. "Not a bit. I should try to be on time, shouldn't I?"

And Dick would rage: "You certainly should! Why, it's positively selfish. Insulting. Folks invite you places and you can't even pay them the courtesy of arriving on time! You ought to be ashamed!"

"I am," Barbara would admit humbly. "I am ashamed, precious."

And "precious" would get up and take her in his arms and kiss her and tell her he was sorry he had talked to her so, but something really ought to be done about it.

• • •

Which would bring the matter to a close, and Barbara on the day following would accept an invitation to a bridge party at three in the afternoon and would arrive at 3:30, having forgotten or disregarded her firm resolutions made in Dick's presence on the night before.

The thing at length reached a point where Dick, driven to exasperation, his nerves on edge, his pride injured, determined that some drastic step would have to be taken to effect a cure.

It must end.

He loved Barbara, he knew, more sincerely and deeply than did the average husband in this day and age.

She had no other faults that were worth mentioning.

She qualified in every respect as a wife and companion and helpmate in his chosen profession.

Yet, despite everything—everything, by golly—she had to be cured of this one deficiency, or one, perhaps both of them, would go crazy.

• • •

And forthwith Dick set himself down to think and scheme and plan to the best of his ability.

And after an hour of deep mental labor, he hit on an idea.

Today was Tuesday. Friday next would mark their second anniversary.

It meant a lot to Barbara. A great lot.

She had been talking about it, planning on it for weeks. She had bought a new frock in which to celebrate.

She had selected the place where they were to dine, chosen the theater which they would attend afterward.

It was, in fact, a big day in her life.

A thrilling, romantic, cherished hour during which she could be alone with her husband and tell him how perfectly adorable he was and how happy she'd been during the past two years.

Dick's plan, taking all the above into consideration, was, on the surface, cruel.

And yet he told himself savagely it was no more than she deserved.

It would, he wagered, cure her once and for all of her great fault.

And so, having decided to promote his brilliant idea, Dick advised his wife that on Friday evening he would meet her on the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets at exactly five o'clock.

He would, he said, leave the office early in order to get there.

This would allow them plenty of time for dinner, without having to hurry.

Barbara was thrilled.

She thought he might have forgotten.

The fact that he had voluntarily mentioned the great day increased her happiness 100 per cent.

She kissed him tenderly and agreed to the time and place of the meeting.

• • •

During the intervening days before Friday Dick felt rather low.

He hated to resort to such tricks; he hated to make Barbara unhappy if it could be prevented.

She was so wholly loveable and trusting. Yet he must go through with it. It was the only way.

She must be cured.

And so when, at last, Friday rolled around, Dick left the office early as previously planned, but instead of driving in town toward the agreed meeting place, he turned his car toward the suburbs and home.

He drove slowly, moodily.

Once or twice he almost changed his mind, but the traffic was heavy and turning about would be difficult.

He parked his car in the garage which he rented, a couple of blocks from the house, and sat in it a few moments, unhappily contemplating the blank wall ahead.

It was now 5:15, and he judged that Barbara would just about be arriving at Tremont and Bolyston.

He couldn't conceive of her being more than a quarter hour late on their anniversary.

• • •

Presently he climbed from the machine, closed and locked the garage doors, sighed heavily, and started home. It was, he reflected, going to be a pretty trying scene when they faced each other later that evening.

He pictured her now, standing on the corner, looking about for him, an anxious expression in her big brown eyes.

He saw her garbed in her new gown, the dress she had bought and preserved for this occasion.

He saw the eager anticipation in her face; the growing disappointment and despair when he didn't come.

"It's no more than she deserves," he told himself savagely.

"I'll cure her once and for all of this habit of being late. She deserves it!"

Yet as he swung into the walk and unlocked the front door, a feeling of utter misery swept over him.

He felt like a cad, sneaky, utterly unhappy. He wished mightily that he had decided against the idea.

It was an underhanded thing to do, a pretty low way of getting back.

• • •

He entered the living room, flung his hat on the divan and slumped dejectedly into a chair.

Guilt and shame and misery were written on his face. And suddenly he gave way to the urge he had been fighting against.

He leaped to his feet, glanced at his watch, discovered it was exactly 5:35 and decided that if he hurried he could get in town in ten minutes. He could offer some excuse. A flat tire. Engine trouble. Anything to explain—

Abruptly he stopped, stared, swallowed, rubbed his eyes.

The bedroom door had opened.

Barbara stood there, resplendent in her new gown, her hat on her head, gloves in her hands, bag tucked under her arm.

At sight of him her eyes widened. She rushed across the room.

"Darling! Oh, precious, how sweet of you to think of coming home to get me! I wondered if you were intending to let me ride in on the dirty street cars. And you got here just in time, too. I was just about to leave! Another moment and I would have been gone!"

Dick stared and blinked and tried to adjust his confused thoughts.

Five thirty-five his watch had said.

And she was just about to leave! And on their anniversary, too!

Rage seized him.

He opened his mouth to speak, checked himself, saw her big brown eyes looking at him so tenderly, so loveably, so adorably.

A feeling of helplessness, utter, stark helplessness took possession of him. He wondered what he'd better do, wondered what he could do, wondered what anyone else in his place would do. And then decided that, under the circumstances, there was only one thing he could do. And he did it. He drew her toward him, folded his arms about her and kissed her.

Switzerland Has Much Snow

Switzerland is an inland mountainous country in the central portion of the Alps and has an area of 15,976 square miles. The northwest of the country, bounding France and Germany, consists of some of the parallel ridges and valleys of the Jura mountains. Between Lake Constance on the Rhine and the Lake of Geneva on the Rhone, are the Lakes Neuchatel, Zurich, Lucerne, Brienz and Bienne, which all drain to the Aar. Lake Geneva and Lake Constance each exceed 200 square miles in area. Owing to its elevation, much of Switzerland is under permanent snow.

Ostrich Fast Runner

The ostrich, one of the swiftest creatures on earth, uses its outspread wings to help it in running, and it can thus reach an amazing speed. Unfortunately for the bird, it does not run straight, but in large circles, so that a hunter mounted on a horse much less swift than the ostrich can cut corners and thus get within gunshot of his quarry. The ostrich feeds mostly on grass and vegetable matter, but it will eat almost anything, including small animals and birds.

SCRAPS OF PAPER

It is disheartening to witness the crumbling of hopes for universal peace, but it is futile to ignore them. Although the situation is as yet not hopeless, it appears that the League of Nations must eventually go the way of all other idealistic enterprises for the pacification of mankind. Treaties pledging security, agreements providing for arbitration of differences between nations, pacts excluding hideous methods of warfare—all these have been solemnly entered into in the past. But with what result?

Experience has proved over and over again that among the most advanced nations of a boasted Christian civilization the cynical slogan, "necessity knows no law," still prevails.

Long before the World war the integrity of Belgium was agreed to by the European power, including Germany. All the great powers agreed in 1899 to refrain from the use of poisonous gases. The destruction of helpless non-combatants was universally banned by common consent. Yet Germany invaded Belgium. She began the use of poisonous gases at Ypres. She destroyed non-combatants in submarine and aerial warfare. Nearly every treaty or convention made by Germany became a "scrap of paper" at the command of necessity. Other nations have not been blameless in this respect by any means.

In 1922 at the Naval Arms Reduction Conference, the great powers again agreed to refrain from the use of gases in war, yet all are working with feverish haste to devise more effective and terrible agencies of gas warfare than ever before.

Treaties look fine in print, but when the urge of necessity comes they usually prove to be only "scraps of paper."

THE STRENGTH BEHIND SILVER

There is great significance in the growing strength of the "silver bloc" in the Senate and the House. Not many months ago a proposal that they would have stabilized the metal and also increased its worth was overwhelmingly defeated. Today is is believed that there is a majority in both houses for similar legislation.

There is unquestionably a vital need for the jobs, the investments, the purchasing power, the taxes, that stimulated mining activities would create. And the slowness with which farm prices have risen, in spite of aggressive work on the part of the government and private farm groups, has led to the belief by many that a change in our monetary policy is essential.

THE DISARMAMENT PROBLEM

A few months ago most experts were inclined to be dubious as to the success of the cause of disarmament this year. Now it looks as if the arms conference is to be even more of a failure than the most pessimistic feared.

There are two very large flys in the disarmament ointment. One is Germany, which is increasing its military budget, and is arming rapidly. So long as Germany follows this course, France refuses to disarm, will, in fact, build up its defense accordingly. Both Germany and France blame each other for wrecking the conference.

The other fly is Japan, which has all the major powers worried. Events of last year, cuiminating in the withdrawal of Nippon from the League of Nations, have proven that Japan doesn't just talk, she acts. And she isn't in any mood to arbitrate.

The upshot of all this is that a world which hasn't been able to recover from the effects of the last war is again nearer war than at any time since the spring of 1914, it is claimed. It is feared by many that an armament race will begin, and if that happens, taxpayers of all countries will find out what heavy taxation really is. Nothing in the world is so expensive. The last war, for example, cost the world close to $400,000,000,000, according to the Carnegie foundation, and future generations will pay for it.

GOODS NOT ORDERED

For several years numerous individuals and firms have greatly annoyed citizens throughout the country by sending them articles of merchandise, which had not been ordered, by mail, "on approval."

Recipients of these unsolicited packages of merchandise, usually hosiery, neckties and other articles of no great value, have apparently accepted the stuff and paid for it in a large percentage of cases, thus encouraging the spread of the practice.

Senders of these goods have attempted to secure payment from unwilling customers by means of tracers sent through the regular postal channels, thus apparently making the Post Office Department a party to the scheme. This has been resented by the Department, which now proposes legislation making these annoying practices an offense against the postal laws, a measure which will no doubt meet with general approval on the part of the public.

Until this nuisance shall be curbed by official action, intended victims might adopt measures of their own similar to that employed by a certain physician, who received a $2 package of socks which had not been ordered. Instead of sending the money, he wrote a letter enclosing a prescription, which he assured the sender of the merchandise to be worth $2, and asked that the account be balanced accordingly. The mail order man evidently possessed a sense of humor. At any rate, he accepted the prescription and let it go at that.

THOUGHTLESS CRUELTY

A news dispatch tells of Teresa Sorona, 14 years old and six feet tall, who ran away from school and home to get away from the ridicule of her fellow pupils. Thoughtlessly her associates made her the victim of a heartless tragedy.

It was hard enough to bear the self-consciousness and embarrassment which the child's abnormal size made inescapable, but those who made her burden greater by their derision were unspeakably cruel.

Thousands of instances like this occur, where some physical defect or peculiarity of sensitive persons is used as a pretext to torture them with unkind remarks which cut to the quick. We read some time ago of a young girl who finally committed suicide because she had been driven to desperation by ridicule of her family name, which had a suggestive meaning to an evil-minded person.

Children will seize upon such opportunities to harass their associates, sometimes in a spirit of fun, but often with vicious intent. While most parents would disapprove of such conduct, many do not take the trouble to explain to their children how cruel it is, or appeal to their better natures to induce them to refrain from it.

Unnecessary infliction of mental suffering is as bad or worse than the infliction of physical pain, and children should be earnestly admonished to avoid both forms of cruelty.

THE MURDER RATE

According to a report recently given out, the city of Quebec, with a population of approximately 100,000, was the scene of only one murder in a whole year.

In the United States there are on an average of approximately ten murders each year out of each city of 100,000 population, while in the cities of Memphis, Jacksonville and Birmingham the annual rate during the past ten years has averaged nearly sixty murders per 100,000, or sixty times that of Quebec.

In spite of the earnest efforts of sociologists and publicists to determine the cause and suggest a remedy for the deplorable crime situation, no appreciable headway has been made in that direction.

Attempts to explain crime as an aftermath of the war fall flat when it is considered that the homicide rate in England, Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, and other English-speaking countries, average only about one-tenth of that of the United States, yet all these were in the war from beginning to end, and suffered from its effects in every way immeasurable more than we did.

It is declared by a recent writer that only one murderer out of 160 is executed in New York, while seventy out of 100 are hanged in London. This may have something to do with our high murder rate.

It seems entirely fitting that a recent book, described as "a romance of the fur trade," is by Constance Skinner.

HYPNOTIZING DRUNKARDS

Another solution of the liquor problem has been advanced by Professor Bechteriev, a Russian psychiatrist, who claims that he has cured many drunkards through the employment of hypnotism.

His method, as reported in the Paris Times, is to take his patients in groups, lecture them on the evils of strong drink, then hypnotize them while continuing his admonitions. When they awake he gives them certain auto-suggestive phrases to be repeated by them several times daily for a month, at the end of which time he says they are cured of the desire for liquor.

That would seem to be a fine system if it would really work. But in this country it might have a tendency to aggravate the unemployment situation. Both bootleggers and reformers would find themselves without jobs.

IF your home is using "a strike a match and wait for water to get warm" kind of water heater, you will be wise in having one of the new Automatic Gas Water Heaters installed now.

The installation of an Automatic entails no fuss or muss. It can be safely vented to an existing flue and it is generally not necessary to change the piping.

A small down payment thereafter gives you immediate installation and use of an Automatic. And then you will have on-tap hot water service in kitchen, laundry and bath in an almost unlimited quantity and at a cost that is less per gallon than the water heater you are now using.

Every day you delay in having the service of Automatic Hot Water means time wasted and convenience sacrificed. Modernize your home by having an Automatic installed. Select the model your home needs today.

TO MOTHER

By M. JENSEN

(The following poem, published in last week's issue of the Record, is republished, an error having been made which we wish to correct.—Editor.)

One loving soul remains the same today,
Tomorrow and 'till time shall be no more.
'Tis God's sweet love in Mother; so I say,.
Let's honor her this day as heretofore.

'Tis Motherhood, God's richest gift to man,
That makes the scheme of life continue on;
Our Country, State and Home, our every plan,
Began with Mother, and has altered none.

The music of the Spheres cannot compare
To a Mother's crooning to her infant child;
For 'tis played upon her heart-strings rare,
Filled with harmony both sweet and mild.

And so we owe to Mother, bless her soul!
The inspiration of our lives on earth;
Our citizenship, our manhood, every goal
That's sought by man, of genuine worth.

Again I say, lets' honor her today,
Let every one bear tribute to her shrine;
Let hearts pour forth in every way
Kind thoughts for her—who is love divine.

"She Loves Me Not" Coming to the Curran

With a record of thirty-one weeks in New York City and still the outstanding money-leader in the box office parade, Howard Lindsay's interesting farce, "She Loves Me Not," is being brought to the Curran Monday evening, May 21, by Homer Curran. This wildly hilarious comedy was written by Edward Hope and first appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. After the New York opening, a motion picture company paid the enormous sum of $77,000 for the rights to film this amusing fanfaronade, but it cannot be shown in motion picture theaters until 1935.

"She Loves Me Not" is the story of a cabaret dancer who turns up at the Princeton domitory and you'll be surprised at what happens. It's something to set the whole nation in commotion, and it does. The United States Senate is shaken to its depths, the motion picture industry is agitated and the Associated Press is all "jittery." "She Loves Me Not" is as crazy as all this, and yet so insanely logical, and acted with such imbecilic sincerity that you don't realize until after the final curtains are down on the six stages that our glorious "Society" is being taken for a "jolly ride."

Mr. Curran is very proud of his company, headed by Dorothy Lee and Russell Hopton, Hollywood film stars, assisted by Betty Furness, Philip Faversham (son of the famous actor, William Faversham), John Arledge, Patricia Havens-Monteagle, and twenty others. The stage direction is a duplicate of the New York production under the skillful talent of Lucille Ryman.

Must Register Camp Trailers

All camp trailers should be registered with the Department of Motor Vehicles before being operated on the highways, advises Russell Bevans, registrar of the Department of Motor Vehicles. At this time of the year, with vacations getting under way, many persons purchase or use some old axle and wheels from some wrecked or discarded automobile, build a small box on it and use it for towing and hauling their camping outfits. Such vehicles must be registered, and the application must be accompanied by a sworn statement as to where the materials were purchased or found, who built the body, and a special identifying number asigned by the department.

MOTOR-DRIVEN BEACON TO MARK MARINE DANGER SPOT

A powerful electric beacon, rotated by a motor, soon will be installed at Diamond Shoals on the North Carolina coast, the scene of almost countless shipwrecks and long considered by mariners one of the greatest perils of the seven seas. For sixty-five years this hazardous spot has been marked at night by a large oil-burning lamp in the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, 193 feet high and tallest of Uncle Sam's marine lights. But the constant pounding of the sea has made it necessary to move the old lighthouse, so modern equipment is to be set up. As an indication of progress since the first light was put in, three men were required to keep the oil burner functioning, while the new beacon will operate at the touch of a button.

This ordinance is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary within the meaning of Section 4058 of the Political Code for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, and safety, and shall therefore go into effect immediately on its passage. A declaration of the facts constituting such urgency is as follows:

The said improvement is to be constructed as a National Recovery highway project, and in order to qualify as such and to obtain the benefits of contribution of the Federal government thereto, and said project must be immediately commenced. The State of California is required on such National Recovery highway projects to provide for and give preference to unemployed local residents and citizens. WHEN THOUGHTS TURN TO TONICS

Fruits and Vegetables Are Better Than Drugs.

By EDITH M. BARBER

ARE you taking your spring tonic regularly? Perhaps I ought to say tonics, because the modern spring tonic does not come out of one bottle, and we eat as well as drink it. The reason why people found it necessary to resort to spring tonics was because in a time when fresh fruits and vegetables were seldom obtainable during the winter months, they naturally suffered with that feeling of enervation, which is known as spring fever.

Rhubarb and soda and dandelion greens were other popular and more pleasant spring dosages. We prefer to take our rhubarb fresh, and we welcome its appearance on the market in such liberal quantities. Dandelion greens, served as a salad, or cooked, make a pleasant change from the usual lettuce or spinach. Here are some dishes which are real spring tonics.

Dandelion Greens.

Wash thoroughly, remove roots, drain and cook with a little water until tender, about fifteen to twenty minutes. Season with butter, pepper and salt. Serve with vinegar.

Rhubarb Roll.

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
5 tablespoons shortening
½ cup cold water
1½ cups brown sugar
4 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup chopped nuts
¾ cup seeded raisins
1 pound rhubarb, peeled and cut into thin slices

Sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder into a bowl. Rub in the shortening and add enough water to form a paste. Roll one-half inch thick and spread with a mixture of the brown sugar, flour, nutmeg, nuts, raisins and rhubarb. Roll like jelly roll, fastening ends securely. Place on a greased baking sheet and brush top with water. Bake about forty-five minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit). Serve hot.

Rhubarb and Orange Salad.

2 cups steamed rhubarb (cooked with a little sugar)
2 oranges
French dressing
Fresh mint
Lettuce or romaine

Chill the rhubarb and pare and slice the oranges. Arrange the fruit in alternate layers on the lettuce and cover with french dressing. Sprinkle with finely minced mint leaves and garnish with mint sprigs.

Tomato Juice Cocktail.

1 pint tomato juice
2 teaspoons tarragon
2 teaspoons basil
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Few drops onion juice

Heat the tomato juice with the herbs; add salt, cayenne and sugar, and allow the mixture to stand for an hour or more; add lemon juice and onion juice; strain and serve.

Caramel Pudding.

1 cup brown sugar
2 cups milk
¼ cup flour
2 eggs

Scald one and one-half cupfuls milk in double boiler with sugar. Mix flour and beaten egg yolks and the remaining half cupful of milk and add to the hot milk, stirring constantly until it thickens. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Tomato Surprise Salad.

6 tomatoes
½ cup diced celery
½ cup diced, cooked chicken
¼ cup chopped nuts
¼ cup mayonnaise dressing
Lettuce

Select medium-sized smooth tomatoes and scoop out the inside. Chill ingredients, mix the chicken, cucumber, tomato pulp, and nuts with mayonnaise dressing. Add more salt if needed. Fill the tomatoes. Arrange on lettuce leaves leaves. Garnish with mayonnaise and decorate each tomato with halves of shelled nuts.

Nose Turned Right Nets $3,000 Award

Cincinnati.—The beauty of a feminine nose was appraised at $3,000 by a jury in John H. Druffel's common pleas court here. That amount was awarded Helen Zlatin, fourteen, as damages for an accident in which her nose, in the language of the suit, was "deflected to the right."

It will be exhibited in the ceramics division of the arts and industries building.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

That Word "Bimbo"

WHO would have thought that we should find a history for the term "bimbo?" Probably the reader who asked for it regarded himself as an optimist.

"Bimbo" has always been slang, but we have a record of it as early as 1837 when the Boston Transcript described it as "a rascally compound of brandy and sugar flavored with lemon peel," and the Baltimore Commercial Transcript called it "an invention of the devil."

"Bimbo" is Italian for "baby" and the connection between this and strong drink is not very plain unless we assume that one who loved his drink might call it his baby! The theory has been advanced that the connection is really with Barbados rum, "bim" being a nickname for a Barbadian!

Today, as closely as this column can determine, "bimbo" is college slang specifically for a "girl with a telephone number!"

Turkey Counts Children of Polygamous Unions

Istanbul.—Polygamy has been forbidden by law in Turkey since 1926. But numbers of clandestine polygamous unions have taken place since then.

Parents of the unregistered offspring of these illegal unions now are being asked to declare their "hidden children" so that they may be made rightful citizens of the republic.

Tens of thousands of these "illegitimate" children are being registered in every province, the parents being pardoned under the amnesty law of last year.

It is expected the census of the country will rise from 14,000,000 to 18,000,000 as a result of the addition of these and other unregistered persons.

It is noteworthy, however, that only the children of the illegal unions are being recognized. The post-1926 polygamous parents are not allowed to have their unions registered as marriages.

More than 6,000,000 poppies are being made in hospitals throughout the country.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

What tunes, hand organs? The question came up in Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky's court in Yorkville recently. Dominick Cassello was the cause. Cassello has spent 30 of his 52 years grinding out music on the sidewalks of New York. But he turned the crank too close to a hospital and the police got him. It seems, however, that the charge was merely technical. It wasn't the hand organ but the choice of music that aroused the ire of patients to such an extent that they complained and Cassello was pinched. He preferred the old tunes, the ones he had listened to when first he exposed his teeth in a flashing smile in exchange for coins. The judge held with the prosecution. "After the Ball," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and other similarly dated airs were not for moderns. "Get hot," he said in effect to Cassello and Cassello promised somewhat sadly, however, since a change meant altering the entire "innards" of the organ.

• • •

While hesitating to criticize an opinion of a magistrate, especially one delivered from the bench, there are those who hold that Magistrate Brodsky may have erred just a trifle. "Smoke Gets Into Your Eyes" or "I Saw a Dream Walking" or any of the airs of today that are played to death over the radio, they believe, have no place in a hand organ. The hand organ as a musical instrument belongs to another generation. Hence, "Little Annie Rooney," "Bicycle Built for Two." "Ta-ra-ra Boom de Ay" and possibly "Sweet Marie," are the proper repertoire since they bring back memories of the little old New York of hansom cabs, gas lights and bicycle cops. In fact, while discussing the verdict of the magistrate, a number of addicts of old-time music for old-time hand organs became quite sentimental.

• • •

The matter is of some importance. Not the pussy willow, the sweet smelling green bud of the lilacs or even the red-breasted robin is the real official spring harbinger here. The hurdy gurdy or hand organ is. Personally, I don't care what is being played so long as I see tenement kids dancing on the sidewalks.

• • •

Speaking of tenements, and it was done deliberately in the preceding paragraph, the old rookeries of the lower East Side have been much in the public eye lately because of the determined campaign of Langdon W. Post, tenement house commissioner, to do away with fire traps. Conditions that have shocked the public have been known to social workers and many others for years. In fact, it was a long time ago that the late Jacob Riis brought them to the consciousness of the public with his, "How the Other Half Live." There are about 3,000,000 tenement dwellers in New York and about 167,000 families live in "old law" tenements which have no fire escapes other than ropes. Hence New York's smoke eaters can tell a lot about tenement conditions. If it wasn't for their bravery and efficiency the death toll, heavy now, would be much heavier.

• • •

There are sections where there are tenements in the rear of other tenements, the houses in the back being reached by long, often dark, hallways through the houses in front. Once upon a time, the houses in the rear were the homes of the wealthy. They were built far back so that the owners might have green gardens between them and the street. When the great immigration wave came, the tenements were built and the poor swept over once aristocratic sections.

• • •

Some of the lower East side sections are still 100 per cent foreign born. The percentage of illiteracy is higher there than anywhere else in the city. Foreign language letter writers make regular visits to the tenements to read letters received and write others.

It is entitled "The Fleet's In," and depicts a scene on shore when the navy boys greet their feminine admirers. THE EXPENSES OF A WEDDING

DEAR Mrs. Post: Does the groom pay for anything besides the marriage license, the wedding ring, and of course, the clergyman's fee? (2) When the double ring ceremony is used, does he pay for both rings? (3) I live in New York, but my fiancee does not, and insists that in her town, the men always buy the flowers. Must I follow custom in her community, or can I simply tell her frankly that my father bought the bridal flowers for each of my three sisters. If I have to buy all these flowers it is going to make an awful hole in the money I've saved for our wedding trip.

Answer: (1) His own, the best man's and the ushers' boutonnieres, ties, and if they wear them, gloves and spats. (2) No, he buys the ring for the bride, and she buys the one for him. (3) I'm afraid that what your father did in New York has nothing whatever to do with what you will have to do in another town. I agree that it can be an appalling handicap—especially at a December wedding! But the only advice I can give is that you talk it over with your fiancee, tell her about your wedding trip budget, and suggest that the bridesmaids carry muffs (very smart at the moment) of velvet or whatever goes best with their dresses. Then the only flowers would be those for the bride. To me the modern fashion of including all flowers (except boutonnieres) as part of the wedding expenses of the bride's family, who can at least control the type of bouquets to be ordered, is more fair than expecting the groom to assume a blind obligation, which he cannot control, and is usually embarrassed to meet.

A reader wrote me lately of an all-white wedding at which there were six bridesmaids, a maid of honor, and two flower girls, all carrying gardenias. The bride's bouquet was a huge one of white orchids. All the flowers were, as always, chosen by the bride. The groom who had never heard of this custom, returned from his wedding trip to find a bill for nearly three hundred dollars. The only way he could pay it was to arrange with the florist to pay it, plus interest, in installments. Meaning that he began his married life with this utterly unreasonable indebtedness.

• • •

BEFORE AND AFTER THE WEDDING—

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is it improper for an engaged couple to pool their money and buy one worthwhile gift for a bride, to whose wedding and reception they both have been invited?

Answer: One present sent by two engaged people is entirely proper.

• • •

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it permissible for me to buy my husband a wedding ring now, after we've been married more than three years? The double ring ceremony was not used and he would like a ring, too. Is this ever done?

Answer: I don't know that it is ever done, but there is no reason in the world why it should not be. If your husband would like to have a ring and you want to give him one, by all means buy the ring you would have bought, have it marked as it would have been marked, and put it on his finger—with perhaps a pledge of even deeper tenderness than you could have made three years ago.

• • •

Dear Mrs. Post: Is a flower girl out of place in a very simple wedding, which is to take place on the lawn of an old country house? The bride is wearing a simple white dress and hat, and her only attendant will wear the same type of clothes in pink and brown. They will wear corsages. What should the flower girl wear if she may be included?

Answer: It would be quite all right to have a flower girl. If she is very little, she might wear one of her own white dresses. If she is older, she would wear pink and brown to match the maid of honor.

• • •

My dear Mrs. Post: My fiance has two sisters my age, whom I know, but we are entirely separate groups. I am having a party at the country club this month at which the news of our engagement is being given out. Because of the nature of the party, ought I invite these sisters to it? If so, should I ask their mother, too?

Answer: If you are having a general party, I think you will have to invite them all. But if it is to be a very small party, and including only a few of your intimate friends, it will not be necessary—unless you are going to make a great deal of the announcement.

Invention of Compass

The origin of the compass has been attributed consecutively to the Chinese, Arabs, Greeks and Etruscans, but it is not absolutely certain how far these accounts are correct. The invention of the compass was partly due to the discovery that a lodestone or a piece of iron which has been touched by a lodestone will direct itself to a point in a northern or southern position, depending on its position north or south of the equator.

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

NOTE: This is a weekly report from the San Mateo Department of Public Health and Welfare, giving facts of importanec to health protection, and a list of contagious diseases reported to the County Health Officer in the previous week, as required by law.

School Health

This is the time of year when boards of education, as well as cities and counties, are making their budgets for the coming year, and if health work is to be adequate, now is the time to provide for it.

It is a matter of astonishment to newcomers in this county that there should still be apparent in the minds of any intelligent citizens, a question whether doctors, dentists, and nurses have a legitimate place in public schools. It is safe to say that there is not an important city in the United States which does not have a well developed system of school health work. School nurses are the first and most urgently needed persons in the development of a school health program, but nurses are not trained to function without medical supervision.

The School Health Examination

The following is quoted from a recent Metropolitan Life Insurance publication, entitled, "The Doctor, the Dentist, and the Nurse:"

"All mothers and fathers want their boys and girls to be as healthy as they can possibly be. The schools, too, want children to be healthy. One of the ways in which many schools are helping children to be strong and well is to give each boy and girl a free health examination. A doctor goes over each child to find out whether any physical defect is harming the child and making it hard for him to ge on in school or to be happy in his work and play. A dentist examines each child's teeth to find out whether there are any holes that need to be filled in order to rescue a tooth from untimely death.

"Perhaps John is not doing well in algebra because he cannot see as well as he should. Perhaps Jane is failing in history because she cannot hear everything that is said in class. Perhaps Tom has to watch every game from the side lines because his 'wind' is not good enough. Failure for children in work or play or in human relationships may be caused by a physical defect which can be remedied. Eye glasses, ear treatments, different combinations of food, special shoes, a trip to the dentist, may make all the difference between a successful, happy boy or girl and a child with a worried look on his face."

Health examinations are one of the most vital factors in every well rounded school health program. The doctor, the dentist, and the nurse must work hand in hand with superintendents, principals, teachers, and all of them with the student and parents, if the best results are to be achieved. The fact that a purely commercial organization like a great life insurance company is spending thousands of dollars to advance school health work by its extensive publications is good evidence that the program is really worth while.

School health work does save money by prolonging lives, but far more important is the saving due to making lives healthier and happier.

Anyone wishing more information on school health programs can get it by writing to the County Health Officer or to the following address:

SAN MATEO THEATRE DAMAGED BY FIRE

One fireman was cut, two others narowly escaped possible serious injury and damage estimated at $65,000 was caused by a blaze that gutted the San Mateo Fox theater early Tuesday morning.

The fire, discovered shortly before 6 o'clock, rapidly swept through the interior of the showhouse and for a time threatened the Hotel Benjamin Franklin adjoining the theatre on Third avenue near El Camino Real.

A cigarette, dropped in the lounge seat section in the front part of the balcony, is believed to have caused the fire.

MINING NOTES

British Columbia's major industries are off to a good year. Pronounced gains in mining and lumbering, and a fair start in agriculture and fisheries during the first quarter, all point to brighter results for the year than have been experienced for some time past.

World production of silver for the first three months of this year is placed at 43,033,000 ounces by American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

World production of lead in the first three months of this year was 367,326 short tons, of which United States contributed 98,089 tons and Canada 29,812 tons.

Estimated gross production of Pioneer Gold Mines of B. C. Bridge River for the month of April was $251,000, with expense of $68,000, leaving $183,000 net profit, before taxes, depreciation and depletion.

E. C. Lieb, noted mining engineer of Pacific Coast states and South America, whose home is in San Diego, recently went north to Fairbanks and left there by plane for Wiseman, where his company owns large areas of ground, and where he will spend the entire season.

The veteran silver champion Key Pitman (a sourdough, by the way) declares that the silver policy as practically agreed upon, in addition to calling for the government to take over monetary stocks of silver, consisted of three principal points: that silver should be required to build up the desired 25 per cent reserve ratio with gold; that this reserve be maintained; that silver henceforth be a primary base for money. The present plans indicate that $1.29 will be the maximum price paid by the government in building up the reserve.

Montana gold prospectors, says a dispatch from Helena, eagerly scanned assay reports that showed values of $27,123.14 a ton in samples submitted from a vein discovered in the property of the Channel Gold Mines, Ltd., near the old Drum Tummon at Marysville.

W. E. Green, a mining man of considerable experience, was a passenger on the Yukon for Valdez, where he intends opening up the old Gold Creek placer properties about six miles from the town.

Jack Peterson, well-known mining man of British Columbia, with interests in nearly every section of the province, is credited with being behind the activity that is rejuvenating the Taseko Lake camp, beyond Bridge River over the Taylor Pass.

In a newsy letter received by The Alaska Weekly, of Seattle, John W. Duncan at Ramport he says that the past winter was the coldest experienced there in the memory of white men at one time reaching 74 below. In spite of it, a number of young men from other parts of the territory have been prospecting in that section, some with good results. They intend to remain in Rampart and go at it again next winter.

Final congressional action on the bill to suspend the performance of assessment work on mining claims was completed on May 11, when the Senate accepted the amendments to the bill adopted by the House. The measure, which was sent to the White House for action by President Roosevelt, provides for the suspension of assessment work for the fiscal year ending July 1, but the provisions do not apply to any claimant not entitled to exemption from payment of the federal income tax for the payable year of 1933.

M. B. Parker, of Hollywood, who inspected the Bob Hatcher properties at Nuka Bay last year and found enough gold to encourage him to proceed with the developement of the Hatcher holdings, is in Seward heading a group of California men, who are not looking forward to carrying on a big project, but it is thought that with the right sort of application enough showing will be made to justify the effort, and that real values will constitute the output.

Driver May Land in Jail

Driving an automobile without the owner's consent with intent to either temporarily deprive the owner of the use of the car, even without intent to steal the vehicle, is defined by law as a felony, says E. Raymond Cato, Chief of the California Highway Patrol. The California Vehicle Act also provides that even though a person may have the consent once to use the car, the previous privilege does not cover any further use of the vehicle.

Roosevelt Endorses V. F. W. Buddy Poppy

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Commander-in-Chief,
Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States,
Washington, D.C.

My dear Commander:

Every orphan deserves a chance for happiness equal to that enjoyed by the average American child. This opportunity is given the orphans of veterans by the V. F. W. National Home at Eaton Rapids, Michigan, maintained by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

Proceeds from the annual sale of Buddy Poppies make possible the maintenance of this orphanage. Buddy Poppies also offer a source of employment and relief for needy and disabled veterans in their home communities. For these two very real reasons, we all should wear Buddy Poppies on Memorial Day.

Very sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

MUST NOT DEFACE SIGNS

Signs on highways erected for the purpose of making automobile travel safer are costly and justify their expense many times over in the convenience to drivers of motor cars and in accidents which are prevented, says Chief E. Raymond Cato of the California Highway Patrol. Throwing bottles, or stones, or shooting at the signs is a violation of the California Vehicle Act, as such actions may deface or destroy the signs and thus undo the study and expense incidental to the placing of the sign at some dangerous intersection, curve or dip in the highway.
